

[54] ANTICONVULSIVE COMPOSITIONS AND METHOD OF TREATING CONVULSIVE DISORDERS

[75] Inventors: Irving Fish, Tenaflly, N.J.; Stephen A. Schwartz, Bronx; Stanley Samuels, White Plains, both of N.Y.

[73] Assignee: New York University, New York, N.Y.

[21] Appl. No.: 162,907

[22] Filed: Jun. 25, 1980

[51] Int. Cl.³ A61K 31/195

[52] U.S. Cl. 424/319

[58] Field of Search 424/319

[56] References Cited
PUBLICATIONS

Lancet, (8-5-78), pp. 304-306.

Comptes Rendus Hebdomadaires des Seances, pp. 1980-1981, (1952).

Chem. Abst., 47, 2761e, (1953).

Ricerca Scientifica, (1961), pp. 312-318.

Biochemical Biophysical Research Comm., (1970), pp. 135-141.

Biochemica Biophysica Acta, (1952), pp. 288-289.

Tsuchiya, J. Physiol. Soc. Japan, 22, pp. 70-74, (1960).

Primary Examiner—Stanley J. Friedman

Attorney, Agent, or Firm—Darby & Darby

[57]

ABSTRACT

A pharmaceutical formulation comprising aliphatic amino acid compounds in which the carboxylic acid and primary amine are separated by three or four units. The compositions are useful in the treatment of convulsive disorders and also have anxiolytic and sedative properties.

36 Claims, No Drawings